HC04/06 Bluetooth Module Configuration is a simple to use application which you can use to modify certain parameters of Bluetooth modules. The tool runs from command prompt and supports a series of arguments, which can be displayed on the screen, for your convenience. This lightweight application allows you to easily configure the Bluetooth transceiver modules which are connected to your system via serial ports or USB serial converters. It is cross-platform, being supported by both Windows and Linux operating systems. The tool is dedicated to managing HC04 and HC06 Bluetooth modules, which are by default programmed as slave devices (“linvor”). All you need to do is insert the desired command and the value, when required. Thus, the names can contain maximum 20 characters, including special symbols while the speed rate can be selected from the list of supported values. HC04/06 Bluetooth Module Configuration can easily be loaded with Command Line or simply run from its installation folder.
